Dear Mother

I am so glad to hear that Father's chill is better. I expect by the time this reaches you you will have forgotten all about it. To-day I finished my second painting & tomorrow I start my third. I have had a letter from Amice to say she will not be here before the New Year. I hardly expected she would be here by Xmas but of course we made all preparations for her & every one here is very dissappointed, Nannie is in a real temper about it We are going to postpone the fantasia & the Xmas tree until she comes, but the men will have their Xmas feast on the night of the 25th as the animals were bought last market day.

Sheikh Jed-el Karim came into the temple today with a party of masters from a neighbouring village, he was very impressed by my diligence because he discovered me sitting down after lunch studying my Arabic lesson book. My painting filled him with amazement.

I think he was very puffed up with pride at having a friendly conversation with me in front of the visiting masters. They can't make out the painting at all.

I think they think there is something magical about it. They peer at it & at the wall & say. "But it is

 I have actually modelled the paper I was glad the picture was so near completion when they came, I only had to look it over & make sure everything was clean & sharp.

Sheikh Jed-el Karim is a very merry man. he has a round face rather dark complexion & very black twinkling eyes & a perpetual smile. he reminds me of a robin he is so quick & perky in all his movements, quite the opposite to Sheikh Sarbit who is more of the languid type, the only time I have ever seen him hurry himself was when he was late returning & thought there might be afreets about.

 Tell Pat I was very pleased with her letter & card & will write to her soon.

Love to you both

Thanks so much for calendars & ribbon threader the latter is exactly like the one I have here that Mahommed Kheir envied so
