Dear Mother

When I arrived home this evening I found the Omdah had come to pay a polite call. so I had to sit & converse with him, we usually make the same inquiries every time, I showed him the views of London & he seemed to be very interested, I also received a call from the Sawish of the Camel Patrol who had come to see if our Soudanis were doing their duties properly, & if I was satisfied, he was a very fine turbaned gentleman, & he & his escort were mounted on camels from the Soudan

To-day we had a party of schoolboys in the temple, the masters were taking them round & telling them all about it, they had a big basket of oranges for the boys & one of the Sheikhs very politely came & offered them to me, of course I had to take one. & express my thanks in my best classical Arabic, I was glad he did not try to enter into conversation or I should soon have broken down - it would have been rather like some one starting a speech in Shakesperian<sup>sic</sup> English & finishing in cockney.

So far we have not had any English Tourists, I expect they will be coming after Xmas.

The knife for melons has been very useful, I dont know how I should have got through some of the tough skins without it.

I should like a few of the new labels. but not more than a dozen.

Our pup is getting on splendidly & is in every sort of mischief. all the men spoil him. he sleeps with them in their room as they are afraid the jackals might get him at night if he stayed out with his mother. he cuddles up to one of them for warmth. & Sardic told me that old Achmud woke up one night in a great fright with the puppy biting his nose. the remembrance of his graphic description makes me laugh so as I write that my pen is wabbling all over the place Nothing much to relate in the way of news just now Love to you both your affectionate daughter Myrtle.
