Dear Father.

I am writing to you this week as I hope this letter will reach you near your birthday so that I can wish you Many Happy Returns of the Day from camp.

We arrived in Port Said about 10 o'clock at night & went to an hotel, the next morning we walked along the water front & saw two Italian troop ships on their way home, one of the officials told us that a great many Italian ships have passed with sick soldiers on their way back to Italy, there was also an English man of war & a French battle ship along side. Our train went at 12.30, & we arrived in Cairo 4.30, Rex was at the station to meet us, Amice came to the flat for tea & then went on to D^r Junkers^{sic}.

I had two very busy days in Cairo & then came on here with Otto, Amice is staying in Cairo for a couple of weeks, her throat has been troubling her again & the throat specialist there is going to cauterise it,

Since I have been here I have been busy every minute, what with unpacking & getting everything in working order, & receiving callers & generally trying to be in at least three places at once it has been a fairly hectic four days.

Every one is well, the dog was delighted to see me, the two cats that Sandie wrote about are no good. one died & the other was such a miserable little thing that they took it back to the village, I think Sheikh Jed-el Karim is going to try to get us a cat from the village where he teaches.

Yesterday evening the Marmur of Baliana & our police officer called, they have been making arrangements for our Soudani guards to be sent out here, & they brought me three of the soldiers from Baliana to stay here until our own soldiers arrive.

Otto seems very well & quite pleased to be at work again. He says he thinks the camp will be much pleasanter this year with only us three

Lots of love to you & Mother
& all sorts of good wishes for your Birthday
& greetings to you from all the people here
Your affectionate daughter
