Dear Mother

It took me such a long time to tell you all about our holiday that I quite forgot to tell you about the Mudir's luncheon party.

the first Tuesday after our return from Hurgada we were invited to have lunch with the Mudir of Sohag the Oultons were also asked. We went over to Sohag the Monday evening after work & spent the evening with Charles & Betty. & slept in their spare room & the next day we all got poshed up in our best clothes. There was an exhibition of onions & the Mudir had offered to take us to see it before lunch, so we turned up at the Muderie about 1 o'clock, there were Betty Amice & I, Charles was dogging the onion show on the plea of pressing work & was joining us later at the Mudir's private house, the Mudir had just finished his days^{sic} work at the Muderie & suggested that we dismiss the Oulton car & accompany him in his, so we went with him to the central courtyard where a very fine car was waiting with a squad of soldiers lined up beside it, when we appeared with the Mudir there was a terrific blast of trumpets & we were literally blown into the car & out into the main street.

The onion show was held in a very fine tent; as we got out of the car the cinema operator & all the reporters took our pictures, we saw all sorts of onions, from all the provinces of Egypt & their special beauties were pointed out to us by the onion expert & we were then presented with examples of the finest onions in the show. We then proceeded to the Mudir's house where we had an enormous luncheon. We started with a puff pastry filled with a sort of cream cheese, then meat cutlets & vegetables, then Turkey & trimmings, then spinach omelet, then stuffed marrows & vine leaves, then cake & fruit salad, & then the desert & coffee, you can imagine we were pretty full by then & it took us several days to recover our appetites.
