into the underground chamber.
 After that the Royal party went to the Kings^{sic} tent that had been erected outside the Temple to have refreshment & the King invited us to join him, so we went & munched chocolates & marron glacé & crystalized^{sic} fruits & drank orange-ade. and altogether had a lovely time.
 Before they left, both the King & Queen shook hands with us & said how much they had enjoyed every thing, so now we are feeling very important & are basking in a lot of reflected glory.
 Of course all Bahians & Arabah & Beni Monsur were crowded round the outside of the Temple to watch the Royal arrival. The King had made a special request that there were to be no soldiers lining the road. & none in the Temple so our Soudanis were banished to the background - the brass band also was not allowed to appear. This King is rather fed up with all this ~~for~~ pomp & ceremony. in fact, last night he escaped & played truant like a naughty school boy. He is travelling in King Fouad's^{sic} {Fouad's / Fuad's} yacht. & M. Laco^{sic} {Lacau} who is escorting him comes in another boat. the royal yacht arrived much earlier at the landing stage at Baliana. so as soon as they were along shore the King disembarked & got into one of the cars & came out to the Temple on his own to see the sunset over the desert. Our men were clearing away our scaffolds etc & saw him

& of course were very thrilled. The King told us about it to-day & said he does not get many chances to escape like that. We do wish we had been there too - we think we rather like Kings -

(P.S. Have just got receipt from the Income Tax for my cheque)

Mrs Davis is here. she did not come to the temple today as she does not belong to our expedition & Little Un funk'd it & stayed behind too. so Amice & I upheld the E.E.S. on our own.

We are all feeling a little fagged out with all the excitement.

Thank you so much for all the caps they make a lovely birthday present. I think I have quite as many visiting cards as I shall need this season now.

Love to you both
Your affectionate daughter
