

26

P & O. S. N. Co.
S.S.Oct 3rd 1929.

Dear Mother & Father.

We are at Marseilles, arrived soon after one o'clock today. I have been ashore with the lady who sits next to me at table. she is something to do with one of the hospitals in Old Cairo. we have had several conversations together, she is fairly elderly but very nice & rather retiring, so finding she was a little uncertain how to spend her time here, I suggested we made a little expedition together, she was so delighted, I am sure she was just longing for a companion but didn't like to be the first to suggest it. We started off at 2.30. we had a map of the place & made a few enquiries as to trams etc. of course we had to run the gauntlet of taxi men, guides touts etc. but finally got on our 51 tram which took us to the centre of the town, from there we walked along looking at shops, our object being to visit the public gardens at the top of the town, they were worth going to see, very formal of course but had several very wonderful fountains & some fine statues, we wandered round one of the museums. & in it there was a model of that wonderful monument to the dead which is in the cemetery of ~~Peré~~ Père Lachaise in Paris, do you remember the photo of it in the guide book? I am so glad to have seen it. There were also some very quaint little pottery figures

BROOME LETTER 26

RECTO

[R]

P & O. S. N. Co.
S.S.
Oct 3rd 1929.

Dear Mother & Father.

We are at Marseilles. arrived soon after one o'clock to-day. I have been ashore with the lady who sits next to me at table. she is something to do with one of the hospitals in Old Cairo. we have had several conversations together, she is fairly elderly but very nice & rather retiring, so finding she was a little uncertain how to spend her time here, I suggested we made a little expedition together, she was so delighted, I am sure she was just longing for a companion but didn't^{sic} like to be the first to suggest it. We started off at 2.30. we had a map of the place & made a few enquiries as to trams etc. of course we had to run the gauntlet of taxi men, guides touts etc. but finally got on our 51 tram which took us to the centre of the town, from there we walked along looking at shops, our object being to visit the public gardens at the top of the town, they were worth going to see, very formal of course but had several very wonderful fountains & some fine statues, we wandered round one of the museums. & in it there was a model of that wonderful monument to the dead which is in the cemetery of ~~Peré~~ Père^{sic} {Père} Lachaise in Paris, do you remember the photo of it in the guide book? I am so glad to have seen it. There were also some very quaint little pottery figures of French peasants, & a whole village scene, with little houses, people looking out of the windows, windmills bridges over streams, herds of goats etc. ^{all pottery} They were very amusing. we also saw pictures, a few very good modern ones & lots of the usual thing by the yard. also casts of statues, some of Rodin's, etc. we might have seen more, but it was closing time at 4 o'clock. so we made our way out into the gardens again & visited a small zoo. Then we had tea & cakes. & after that another tram ride; we had been told of a circular route that went along by the sea past a famous bathing place at Courniche, ^(spelling is guesswork) so we made our way to a certain side street where they sell flowers & got on the tram & had a glorious ride right out of the town along the bay, we could see the lighthouse & the Chateau d'If. & all the little islands, the rocks are white & the sea a most vivid blue, almost purple. not a bit green like the Atlantic. we returned inland & got down at the point we started from. the ride took an hour. & our two fares came to something less than 5 francs. so it was not very extravagant. our tram back to the docks cost us 60 centimes each & we arrived back on board soon after 7 o'clock just in time to dress for dinner.

Oct 3rd

This concludes my adventures up to date I expect I shall have something more to tell you ~~when~~ before I post this at Malta. I am just going to the upper deck to look at the lights of Marseilles before I turn in.

Love to you both.
Myrtle.

of French peasants, & a whole village scene, with little houses. & people looking out of the windows, windmills bridges over streams. herds of goats etc. <all pottery>. They were very amusing. we also saw pictures, a few very good modern ones & lots of the usual thing by the yard. also casts of statues. some of Rodin's, etc. we might have seen more, but it was closing time at 4 o'clock. so we made our way out into the gardens again & visited a small zoo. Then we had tea & cakes. & after that another tram ride; we had been told of a circular route that went along by the sea past a famous bathing place at Courniche^{sic}, (spelling is guesswork) so we made our way to a certain side street where they sell flowers & got on the tram & had a glorious ride right out of the town along the bay, we could see the lighthouse & the Chateau d'If. & all the little islands, the rocks are white & the sea a most vivid blue. almost purple. not a bit green like the Atlantic, we returned inland & got down at the point we started from. the ride took an hour. & our two fares came to something less than 5 francs. so it was not very extravagant. our tram back to the docks cost us 60 centimes each & we arrived back on board soon after 7 o'clock just in time to dress for dinner.

This concludes my adventures up to date I expect I shall have something more to tell you ~~when~~ before I post this at Malta. I am just going to the upper deck to look at the lights of Marseilles before I turn in.

Love to you both.
Myrtle.