Dear Mother

I was dreadfully sorry to hear of Ethel's sudden death, it must have been a shock to you also, coming so soon after the news of her illness, I had intended writing her a long letter today, but instead I have written notes to Ron & Falconer.

Thank you very much for getting the pencils for me they are exactly what I wanted, I am glad you were able to get the long ones, and all six at once, they came in plenty of time before I had finished the stock in hand

Wip-wat is very well his leg has healed up perfectly, our kitten "Mugallin" (striped one) is also very fit & thinks petting is much more important than eating, he is never still one moment.

I do not think we shall see much of the sparrows this year, we are working in the hypostyle hall, & this is the abode of owls, they have their houses in dark holes in the roof also part is open to the sky & there are hawks on the look out for unwary small birds so sparrows make their houses in the inner chapels, where they can conduct their private affairs unmolested.

Amice was lazy this morning & had her breakfast in bed, when she made her first appearance some time later she produced the inclosed poem.

Sheikh Jed-el-Karim is feeling very bucked he has a new assistant teacher, I quite expect the young man will be produced some time or other to pay his respects to me.

I have been busy sticking calanders on to the little casts of the head I brought out with me they look very pretty with the green ribbon, I shall soon have to start writing Christmas letters I do not think I shall need any more calendars as the ones with the ships on will do for our rooms here.

 I have been making up the skirt from the stuff I bought in Girga it tailors beautifully.
 I enclose a cutting for you to see, if it wears well, & does not crumple I think I shall get another length for wear at home. The old machine is working splendidly, I am glad I brought it out here.

Lots of love to you & Father
 also to Pat.

Oh Bill + Ben were 2 strong men

They stayed in bed till

Till  they stayed in

And then did shout for to be fed.

For to be fed they then did SHOUT

(On beef + bread + Guinness' Stout)

On   +  +

Then, having fed, they turned about

- they turned about then (having fed)

And slowly crawled back into
